Sometimes the day you die is only the beginning...

In Piper Willow's world, there happens to be hope after suicide.

Piper dies the summer of her high school graduation and finds herself in a between worlds terminal called the Station. She's given only two choices: Move on to the unknown where she'll be forced to spend an eternity in pain, or be trained as a Volunteer and return to Earth as the subconscious for at an risk individual dangling from the end of their rope.

Does Piper have what it takes to save a life, to be the nagging voice inside another person's head? Or will she fail and end up lost and tormented by her own pain and loss...forever?

A touching tale that addresses sensitive topics for YA's, while offering up hope and peace for the reader. Because everyone deserves a second chance...

“Excuse me, Niles...I mean, Mr. Abbott. But, where are we?”

“I’ll explain everything to you dear, just as soon as we reach the Station.”

“What station? We aren’t in the hospital? Where’s my Dad?”

“No Piper, this isn’t the hospital, and your father is at home...he’s fine. Please, follow me.”

He turns away and continues on through the light. I hang my head, staring at my bare feet as we walk. Even though my cuts are gone, I keep rubbing my arm. It’s soothing. I almost bump into Niles when he stops abruptly.

“We’re here,” he says softly.
